What should CAFE do?

- Clarify & simplify its identity
- Strengthen, leverage & broadcast strong collaboration links with other Christian business organisations
- I think "leading in the economy" needs unpacking, e.g. to relevant to SME
- Update its approach to engage more directly with issues of business culture & practice
- Challenge business leaders who are Christians if their firms are involved in excessive pay for the top and exploiting their suppliers while not contributing to the local community.
- Be bold about exerting influence. We need strong and authoritative Christian voices in a world that operates without fixed values.
Keep on being available!

What should CAFE do?

- Help with awareness of each other, e.g. a members-only database of who is part of CAFE and whatever they want to share with each other, with the aim of how we can help support each other, either with products/services, mentoring/advice, etc
- CAFE is showing a welcome return to its mission of interpreting the Gospel for those in business at executive level and providing support
- Explain more clearly and loudly that Christian principles are for all aspects of life.
- Focus on the Principles and their dissemination
- Develop training programmes in subjects like ethics.

What should CAFE do?

- Widen the missional side of what CAFE stands for, there is a desperate need for Christians in business to be heard, and not just in the South but around the whole of the UK
- Find ways of disseminating its material more widely
- If CAFE had a network in East Anglia and not just in London, I would feel more able to participate.
